THE NAME THAT LIVES

For many years after the ceremony of decorating the graves of the dead became an established custom, it was the rule to allow some local orator to indulge in a long winded, tedious speech on the occasion. At the same time it was in order to read Lincoln's immortal address delivered at the dedication of the Gettysburg cemetery.

As the years went by the public began to realize that the words of Lincoln really left nothing to be said, and finally the local orators saw how tame and spiritless their efforts seemed along side the master tones of Lincoln, that continue to call from the grave as an inspiration to the living.

The local orator began to fade from view for he was not listened to, and still the public that gather by the mounds of the dead listen with awe and veneration to that great classic of oratory, which has never been surpassed in the English tongue. It took two minutes to deliver it and it will stir the hearts of men a thousand years from now.

So much grandeur of diction, so much matured thought and so much beauty of expression was never packed in so small a compass as this sublime utterance. If the orators of the present day could only study the simplicity of its style they might profit by it, but the world is still filled with men who require two hours to express themselves, and imagine that flamboyant adjectives constitute force in language.

No less striking example of beautiful English is a letter written by President Lincoln to Mrs. Bixby of Boston:

Executive Mansion, Nov. 12, 1864.
 "Dear Madam:—I have been shown in the files of the war department, a statement of the adjutant general of Massachusetts that you are the mother of five sons who have died gloriously on the field of battle.
 "I feel how weak and fruitless must be any words of mine which should attempt to beguile you from a grief so overwhelming; but I cannot refrain from tendering to you the consolation that may be found in the thanks of a republic which they died to save. I pray that your Heavenly Father may assuage the anguish of your bereavement, and leave you only the cherished memory of the loved and lost, and the solemn pride that must be yours to have laid so costly a sacrifice upon the altar of freedom.
 Yours sincerely and respectfully,
 ABRAHAM LINCOLN."

The Tahoe season will open early this summer. Already snow is disappearing from the resorts and things are being put in readiness for the pleasure-seekers.

The allotment of lands on the Walker Lake Reservation has been made, except a small portion of grazing land, and this will soon be finished up. It will probably be September before the president will issue the proclamation throwing open the mineral land to the prospector.
